So 19D's tell me again about heartbreak and misery. This is a photo I stoled from OAF nation. Its on top of the reaper at Pendleton. The flat brown patch in the distance is the basic training rifle range. We did out 15 miler over it. We also used to do morning pt runs and find my rock F...F...games up the reaper, I was stationed at the base of it for my 0313 years.

Who knew that the crappy eye relief with a scoped M1A would actually help me out a little. Also all you SDM OIF/OEF guys out there I'm looking for a M1A scope mount when they were EBR upgraded the mounts went somewhere. If you have one or any surplus M14 stuff let me know.

I'll look into the smith enterprises mount. It sounds great. A buddy of mine has the scout with the long rib on the forend. He runs a 4 moa red dot so we never really know exactly how good the mount is, but it seems to be decent for his 3 gun fun at those distances.

2y

Jon Batts

That was my issue as well. The dot is fine for 3gun but at 3-4 MOA it limits the rifle. I by no means think the scout would be a real long range gun but I'm sure that with a little tweaking 800m is well within its capabilities.

2y

Rob Kovach

Absolutely. We had a guy shooting a 1:9 16" m4 as a service rifle match last year with Winchester White box ammo, and he really didn't do too bad at 600 with that. The scout is probably way better suited, if not only because of better ballistics.

I'm back from San Antonio. The eye comes out next Tuesday. I'm ok with it. To do this job you better decide how you are going to deal with stuff like this before it happens. One Soldier told me once, "If your allergic to gunpowder go work in a bank". I believe that. You have to be ready and mentally prepared for this stuff, we'll try the best you can. I also have to say that if you put other things in front of God he may remind you what is important and you may not be a fan of the way he does it. You may want to take heed to that little voice in the back of your head. Just saying. We are exhausted and want to thank everyone for bringing stuff for us and helping out. I will tell you I have been in many units but 6-9 is definitely the best. Everyone has been there from the SCO to the most junior enlisted. The thing is they wanted to and weren't told to, that's rare. I will get back on the horse and try and hit the range in the next month depending on surgery. On that note let me know if you have m14 parts etc laying around. Have a happy thanksgiving and thank you for the prayers. We are not out of the woods yet but we have at least oriented the map.

Today we leave for San Antonio to go see the specialist. Will be discussing and most likely removing my right eye. With that done it causes less of a chance of future injury. Try to keep a positive outlook, I'm sure they'll be a couple more breakdowns in the near future. I'll get through it though, I refocused and I'm putting God first again. I'm still in a lot of pain but I will make it. I'm not going to let this ruin shooting for me. I can still use my left side for longer shots and switch to the right for closer stuff. To facilitate that I am going to run a setup like I have in the picture when I get around to getting one. I'm getting one with throw levers so I can move it from one platform to another and I won't have to buy 3. If you are interested in buying my elcan specter it's for sale for $1100 so I can fund the other setup. I can still use your prayers that this is the extent of the damage. It should be. I also want to thank everyone for all they did. I may want to get out in the future but as of now I need to just stay at home. Too

Update I got back from the specialist today. I can barely register light in my right eye. It doesn't matter because they're going to end up removing it. Sometimes it's just better to do it and if I won't be able to see very well anyway I don't care. I might as well get it removed that way won't screw up my other vision. I could use some prayers that the other I won't develop problems because the trauma to the right. Sometimes that happens but it's weeks out

This is the tank Otto Carius helped destroy. I can't remember who I was telling this to but the Panzer 2s couldn't penetrate the armor. They had a mobility kill and had to fire until they pierced the barrel. Go read Tigers in the Mud.

Three weeks ago I officially left first platoon Comanche troop for my position up at Squadron. It sucks because Comanche is tasked so heavily I couldn't get the platoon together before I left. I wanted to pass on some stuff to my fellow Soldiers before there is no one left that was there in the beginning. First off I want to say that this was the best platoon I have been in during my career. I am very proud to have done my PSG time with 1st Platoon, Comanche troop. I do feel a little cheated that we were not allowed to go fight. We were absolutely lethal. The difference between this platoon and the others I have been in were the Soldiers. Not since I was in the Marine Corps have I been in a unit where every person cared about being there and actively sought to improve the organization. That is what happens when every person from the PL to the most junior dismount knows that everything they do matters. By no means was this all my doing. I owe the success of the daily operations and the execution of missions to Mr. Valadez soon to be Officer Valadez. When I took over I was worried there could have been issues but he made it clear he was there to make me successful. He turned out to be my best friend over the last two years. I also want to thank both my PLs. 1LTs Craycraft and Sweeton. Both of you were outstanding leaders that were not afraid to listen and fight for their Soldiers. I wouldn't hesitate to go to war with either one of them. I want to thank all my section sergeants but one in particular needs mentioning. SGT Skillern was great to bounce things off of. It's always good to have someone that is not scared to walk right up and tell you professionally that you are screwing up or the platoon is getting screwed over. The last individuals that I will mention are the crew of Red 4. We were cheated during gunnery. Just had to put that out there. We worked well together and you guys probably let me sleep more than you should. I hope both of you go on to do great things. For all the Soldiers, mentors (SFC Lee, SFC Fyffe) and everyone else that I didn't mention it is just because of time and space due to lack of your contributions. I hope all of you learned something (good or bad) from me.

Scouts Out!

Andrew Scott Sterling It was truly a pleasure working for you. I learned more from you than you will ever know. The platoon worked hard and cared because you worked hard and cared. You cultivated an environment that everyone wanted to be part of. Work didn't seem like work (most days). I would go to war as your wingman anyday of the week. Thanks for everything.

Many of you know who she is. I personally have seen her every time I have deployed from or returned to Hood. They are recognizing her 17 NOV here at Hood. The ceremony is closed or the place would be overrun but I thought it was worth mentioning. I cant imagine what it is like for to walk in OIF chow hall knowing she hugged most if not all of the KIA Soldiers in the pictures.

I absolutely want to punch William B. Ruger in the face for inventing the most difficult .22 to ever get back together. On another note I hope parts kits are cheap because I have a friend that got impatient and tried to force the main spring back in snapping one of the pins holding everything inside. Stupid.

Yes I know I look awkward. Give me a break I'm having to shoot weak side because of the broken wrist. I still love what that 1oz slug does to the heavy steel plate.

Range time today, first time with the Mossberg 930. It was really nice to shoot and the kick was not painful at all. It was difficult with my broken wrist though.

Update on the wrist. It's the scaphoid bone that is snapped in two Not just fractured. I am in a cast awaiting an appointment for surgery and pins. On the good side it kept me out of an instructor job at Benning and having to report in January.

Jon Batts Branch called me Friday.

2y

Jon Batts Alex they told me 6-8 weeks after surgery but to me that sounds optimistic. Did you see the video on my page?

2y

Jon Batts Alex it's not just cracked its in two separate pieces. I was still riding my bike on trails and doing push-ups. I shook hands with someone and that was what sent me to get X Rays. It was two weeks after the fall. Yeah it hurt.
